Cynthia Dekel

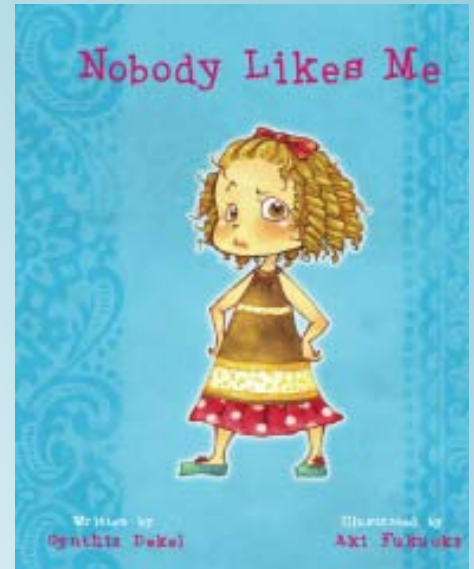

Bedtime reading quickly became a passion for Cynthia Dekel after the birth of her first daughter. Searching for good books with a message and a sense of humor was almost a part time job as her oldest child had a never ending thirst for more stories.

Born and raised in Georgia, some of Cynthia's earliest memories involve creating stories and writing poetry. Her only poem ever submitted to any publication written in High School was chosen to be in the local paper, but she never pursued a career in writing until baby two entered her life.

After the birth of her second daughter, her oldest was especially sensitive to the amount of attention she received. One day she had a particularly tough time, sat down on the stairs, and cried out "nobody likes me!". Cynthia soothed her daughter and instantly thought this is something all children go through and wouldn't that be a great book.

The poem and story came to her, and Nobody Likes Me the book has come to life.

Parents and children alike are relating, laughing, and using the story as a starting point for important discussions about self esteem, respecting others, and reminding ourselves things are not always as they seem.

"I want to help children learn to laugh even in times of trouble and to show them they are understood."
